

Markets work best when:

- 1.They are reasonably competitive—in other words, there are several buyers and sellers,
- 2.Buyers and sellers have access to sufficient reliable information,
- 3.Resources are relatively mobile and free to move from one use to another in response to changing conditions, and
- 4.Market prices reflect the full costs and benefits of production and exchange.